

The tribes of the _____ were a group of Native Americans that lived in the _____ region. These tribes consisted of the _____, _____ and _____. They called themselves _____ which means "PEOPLE" in their Algonquian language.

The tribes of the Three Fires lived in the Great Lakes Region. The Potawatomi settled in the _____ section of Michigan around what is now the city of _____.

The Odawa lived along the _____ shores of Lake _____.

The Ojibwa lived along the _____ shores of Lake _____ and the _____ shores of Lake _____.

Since the tribes of the Three Fires moved each season, their housing had to be easy to carry and set up. For most of the year, they lived in _____.

_____ had frames of wooden poles formed into a _____ shape covered with _____ bark, _____ skins or _____. Some other names for the wigwams were _____ lodges and _____ houses.

The females of the Three Fires tribes were responsible for _____ and gathering _____, _____ and _____.

They would collect and preserve foods such as _____, _____, _____, wild _____, _____ from lakes and rivers and _____ syrup.

The men of the Three Fires tribes were responsible for making _____ for traveling and _____ goods, making _____ for hunting animals such as _____, _____, _____, _____, and _____.

The tribes of the Three Fires built lightweight, swift _____ to travel on lakes and rivers. They were made out of _____.

In winter, the tribes used toboggans and _____ to move goods and people from place to place and wore _____ on their feet to help them walk over deep snow.

